EDNA PLANT SUGGESTION—Ralph Stephenson, Edna Plant employee, recently received cash awards for two suggestions accepted by the company. One was to install a light in the middle of the slasher which turns on when the beam is full. This enables the slasher tender to know when the beam is ready to doff while he is working at the back, so that the beam will not run too full. His other idea was to install a stop and start switch on each side of the slasher to enable the slasher tender to operate the machine from the side when he is leasing selvages and working on the machine.

Newlyn St. Scout Troop Re-registered

Boy Scout Troop 262, sponsored by Newlyn Street Methodist Church, has recently been re-registered with Don Weaver as Scoutmaster. Some goals have been set for the year ahead; namely, every scout advancing at least one rank, and at least two members of the committee present at the scout meeting each Friday night at 7:00.

The Troop could take a few new boys at this time, preferably boys of 11 and 12 years of age.

At the Charter Review the treasury was in good shape, and sufficient money to re-register and to begin the activities of the new year. Each boy who registers and pays his 50 cents will receive "BOYS LIFE" for the charter year.

The Sunday School had 212 in attendance last Sunday. A number of these are endeavoring to make perfect attendance for another three months and to receive some recognition of that perfect attendance.

The church witnessed a Christain Stewardship program and service last Sunday.

The evening service was well supported by 130 people. The minister of the church brought a message from the subject: "Warnings and Helps for our Twentieth Century America."

Howard Garner, president, presented softball schedules and umpire assignments to the Y's Men.

The son of a Cone Mills purchasing Department employee teemed with Hal Greeson to sing America's number one hit. The program consisted of classical peices, hymns, spirituals and popular tunes. The choir will sing for the Civitan International convention in Asheville in June.

Worth St. Observes Centennial Birthday

NEW YORK—Worth Street, named on May 16, 1855, in honor of Major General William Jenkins Worth of fame in the Mexican War of 1846, and center for 90 years of the nation's marketplace for the products of mills from Maine to Texas, last Monday observed its centennial birthday with ceremonies conducted under auspices of the Worth Street Historical Society at 40 Worth Street.

Honorable Robert F. Wagner, Mayor, proclaimed the centennial and reaffirmed the act of the Honorable Fernando Wood, Mayor in 1855, who on May 16 of that year signed a bill to rename "Anthony" Street as "Worth" Street, as passed by the Aldermen and Councilmen in response to a petition of 21 citizens headed by L. G. Morris. The Mayor's proclamation was presented by Comissioner James J. O'Brien, and Murray Stand, City Clerk and archivist, displayed and read the original petition and enactment of 1855.

Frank L. Walton, president of the society and well known historian, opened the meeting and Marvin R. Cross of Greenwood Mills, Inc., presided for the occasion. John M. Reeves of Reeves Brothers, Inc., called attention to the flag of the society and to Worth Street being perhaps one of the only streets having a flag, an historical society, and certainly so long and distinguished a textile background.

James A. Kelly, deputy city clerk of Kings County and borough historian of Brooklyn, spoke on ancient relics recovered in the excavation of the subway at Worth and Lafayette Streets which originally was the site of old Collect Pond. Lynn McCracken, custodian of the John Peter Zenger Memorial, spoke on General Worth, who gave his name alike to Worth Street, Fort Worth, Texas, and Lake Worth, Florida.

Loring McMillen, president of the Staten Island Historical Society, cited records showing that when the Indians sold the island to the Dutch they were compensated mainly in textiles, and Mr. Walton noted growing evidence that Manhattan Island was sold for $24 worth, not of "beads and trinkets", but probably in great part for cloth. Arthur Carlson of the New York Historical Society also addressed the gathering.

At an ensuing luncheon for trustees and guests of the Society held at the Arkwright Club of the City of New York, Frank Leslie of Leslie & Co., trustee of the society, described the traditions and events of the textile marketplace in Worth Street over past years, and William P. Wright, Jr., of Greenwood Mills, representing Worth Street, Inc., presented a prospectus of present day Worth Street, alike as a great center of textile marketing and as an influence for the advancement of the textile industry wh ver located.

The membership in the Council includes Avondale Mills, Inc.; Joshua L. Baily & Co., Inc., representing Gold-Tex Fabrics Corp.; Cone Mills Inc.; Iselin-Jefferson Co., Inc., representing Alabama Mills, Inc.; Lane Cotton Mills Division of M. Lowenstein & Sons, Inc.; McCampbell & Company, Inc., representing White Brothers, Inc.; Pepperell Manufacturing Company, Inc.; J. P. Stevens & Co., Inc., Industrial Cotton Mills Division; Swift Manufacturing Company; Texas Textile Mills; Turner Jones Co., Inc., representing Canton Cotton Mills; and Woodward, Baldwin & Co., Inc., representing Erwin Mills.

The committee for the Council consists of Robert Shaw of Cone Mills Inc., as mentioned; Robert Dempsey of M. Lowenstein & Sons, Inc.; William Hill of Pepperell Mfg. Co.; J. D. Andrews of J. P. Stevens & Co.; John Howland of Woodward, Baldwin & Co.; and John L. Severance, secretary of the Association and secretary-treasurer of the Council.

Named as operating agency for the Council is Student Marketing Institute, New York public relations and sales promotion firm. Robert M. Stelzer and Selig E. Cohn, directors of the agency, will supervise an intensive campaign for the advancement of the fabric for women's wear, men's wear, boys' and teens' and children's wear, at consumer and trade levels.

A pilot-test survey of retailers across the country who handle blue denim garments recently initiated the promotion campaign of the new Denim Council, through its agency, Student Marketing Institute, New York. At the same time, letters were mailed to all cutters of the fabric, alerting them of Council plans.

The Denim Council also announces its official slogan, Durable Denim—the Family Fabric for Work and Play, to be used widely in retail and consumer promotion.

Figures Without Facts Are Meaningless

Numbers are meaningless unless they are tied up in an intelligent manner to that which they are applied. If a farmer raises and sells ten bushels of potatoes and makes a profit of two dollars, no one would be apt to envy him or in fact pay much attention to his earnings. On the other hand, if he increased his potato farming and raised and sold in a similar manner ten thousand bushels of potatoes and made a profit of two thousand dollars, there might be some comment. The fact would remain though that his profit per bushel of potatoes would be the same.

Profits of business are quite frequently misunderstood. Some of this misunderstanding is caused by deliberate misrepresentation. Profits made by a business stated without relationship to the investment involved, the sales made, and other important pertinent factors such as taxes to be paid, ability to continuously meet fair competitive payrolls, the need of funds for modernization, etc., are truly meaningless.

Furthermore, in placing business profits under a critical magnifying glass, in all fairness it is important to give due consideration to the men and women who take a chance and invest their money in business. In the first place, people buy stocks and thereby invest in business in order to secure dividends and/or to benefit from a higher value of the stock because of earnings. If it were not for that fact, there would be no incentive to invest in business.

But, getting back to the fallacy of talking about business profits without considering them in relationship with the important, inseparable factors, we believe a better and clearer understanding would result if a person who thinks of and talks about profits solely in the light of how many thousands or millions of dollars made were to apply the profit yardstick to himself.

In the first place, the small stockholder in a company shares no better or no worse than the large stockholder when it comes to sharing profits through dividends.

If a person were to buy four shares of mill stock at 25 dollars a share, his outlay of investment would be 100 dollars. We doubt that either he or anyone else would feel that his dividends were anything to shout about if earnings were such that he were paid 4 dollars a year. Suppose, though, that the same company in which the man owned his four shares of stock had a total of 20,000 stockholders who together risked their money in purchasing 2,000,000 shares of stock. Would the fact that all together they would on the same basis of $1 a share receive $2,000,000 a year in dividends alter the situation?

All rules of fair play and sound ethics seriously condemn practices of rabble rousing and attempting to confuse and mislead by highlighting business earnings in dollars without telling the complete story.

The story of risking money with the hope of receiving dividends and increasing wealth through profits is the story of the progress of the United States. If the day were ever to come (Heaven forbid) when all incentive to make a reasonable profit from investment or promotion or expansion is destroyed, the great American story would be ended, and a new book of hopelessness and despair would begin.

Employee's Son Wins Grad. Assistantship At Fla. State College

James T. Butler, employed in Proximity Plant's Beaming Department, Mrs. Butler, Proximity Spinning Department, and Miss Delsie Butler, Cone Mills Employment Office, are all justly proud of Connie Mack Butler, their son and brother.

Two clippings from the newspaper at Winter Park, Fla. tell the story:

"Connie Mack Butler, Rollins baseball star, has been awarded a $1170, plus tuition, graduate assistantship by Florida State in Tallahassee, and a $1450 grant by the Institute of Paper Chemistry Graduate School, Appleton, Wisconsin.

"Connie has accepted the grant offered by Florida State and plans to earn his master's degree in Organic Chemistry, and either teach chemistry at the college level or enter industry.

"A chemistry major, Connie last year received the Thomas R. Baker award for outstanding work in third year chemistry. He is attending Rollins on an achievement scholarship.

"Connie is president of the Senior Class, member of the X Club, O.D.K., national honorary fraternity, and Future Teachers of America. His name is listed in Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities.

"Well known for his outstanding participation in sports, Connie is a four letter man in basketball and baseball. Last year he was chosen all stater in baseball and selected for the All-Southern team and the the All-American team."

Butler Repays Confidence Of Coach With Bat, Book

"The yells and catcalls cease as Connie Mack Butler steps up to the plate. The stands echo, "Come on, But," and a voice from the bench calls, "Be a good hitter, Connie!"

"Everyone knows that voice as Joe Justice, the Tars' coach, but many of them don't know that it was Joe who found Connie in Greensboro High School in North Carolina and asked him to come to Rollins. The fans don't realize that it was Joe who helped develop perhaps the best ballplayer Rollins ever had. I asked Connie about Joe and he replied, "He gives you a heck of a time, but a fair shake."

"Joe saw Connie at the North Carolina All Star Basketball game in the late winter of 1951. In that year, Connie made All Conference in basketball and All State in baseball. "Mack" first saw action in baseball during his sophomore year of high school as an infielder. In Connie's senior year his coach moved him to center field because of an arm injury prior to the season. The change caused Connie's hitting to improve and he attributed his All State award to this factor.

"Connie arrived at Rollins in the fall of 1951. His hopes were to major in Chemistry and play ball. His athletic career began with his favorite intramural sport, touch football. Intramurals stopped for Connie as the 51-52 basketball season began. Connie saw a great deal of action as a forward with fluctuations at guard. His first year with the hoopsters wasn't too successful, but the next season saw Connie averaging 13 points a game and a very reliable ball player. Connie played one more year of basketball but couldn't compete in his senior year due to an injury sustained last summer."

BIRTHDAY—Billy Lee Windsor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Lee Windsor, Reidsville, was honored on his sixth birthday with a family dinner. His mother is employed on the second shift in Edna Plant Spinning Department.

When these are released, The Textorian office will go through the list and pick out names of employees' children. Including each and every graduate in this case is very difficult.
